Campeones win the Goya Award to the Best Spanish Film

The favourite film only win two awards

Seville, 03.02.2019, 02:44 Time

USPA NEWS - 'Campeones' (Champions), directed by Javier Fesser, won the Goya Award to the Best Spanish Film in the 33rd Goya Awards gala celebrated in Seville (Southern Spain), a city that overturned with the party of the Spanish Cinema. Hundreds of people concentrated before the Sevillian Palace of Exhibitions and Congresses to see and applaud their favourite artists. This was the second time that the Goya Awards gala is celebrated out of Madrid and was success.

'Campeones' was the favourite with eleven nominations but finally was the looser because only won three awards, including the Best Novel Actor Award for Jesus Vidal and the best original song for 'Este es el momento' (This is the moment), performed by Coque Malla. The movie talks about a group of disabled people who play basket and manages to overcome its weaknesses. A social movie “that make visible the disabled people,“ said Jesus Vidal. 'Campeones' will be the Spanish movie on the Mexican Ariel Awards, according the Academy of Arts and Cinematographic Sciences of Spain. As best Director, the Goya Awards named Rodrigo Sorogoyen for 'El reino' (The Kingdom). As best Actor was named Antonio de la Torre for 'El reino' and best Actress, Susi Sanchez for 'La enfermedad del domingo' (The disease of Sunday). 'El reino' was de winner in the Goya Awards gala, with seven awards, before 'La sombra de la ley' (The shadow of the Law) with three awards and 'Campeones' also with three awards.

The president of the Academy of Arts and Cinematographic Sciences of Spain, Mariano Barroso, said that “17 and half millions of people have come to the movie teather to see a Spanish movie an the big screen, after getting around an ever thicker forest of screens of all sizes. That has a merit.“ But, he added, “we would be very clumsy if we saw those thousands, millions of small screens as enemies.“ This year, the film 'Jurassic World, el reino caído' (Jurassic World, the fallen Kingdom), directed by Juan Antonio Bayona, was the thirth movie more seen on the world and the first in Spain. For this, Mariano Barroso said: “The cinema will not desappear. Only he is forever searching new modes“ of expression. “Maybe is the moment when a girl say at home that she want to be director, script writter or actress, their parents do not feel a chill of fear. Maybe they should feel a chill of pride because their daughter wants to have a decent job.“
